In fact, Rosenbaum notes that in 2007 when Israel launched a military strike on a presumed Syrian nuclear installation, the London-based Spectator published a little-noticed article on Oct. 6 quoting a senior British official: "If people had known how close we came to World War III that day there'd have been mass panic . . . [and we] really would have been dealing with the bloody Book of Revelation and Armageddon."

... The fact that the hand of man finds itself recurrently, obsessively scripting fiery, self-immolating cataclysmic conclusions to the human saga may well be, at the very least, self-fulfilling prophecy. It may also say that deep down, we really are a species obsessed with its own self-destruction ...

Rosenbaum concludes: "It's almost a fatalistic admission that it will."

All this will make it more likely that — sooner or later — Israel will unleash nuclear weapons [and] risk inaugurating World War III — to prevent what they perceive as an impending nuclear strike. Israel will not wait for the world to step in. They may not even wait to be sure their intelligence . . . is rock-solid certain. They can't afford to take that chance. It is not something I advocate; it is something I foresee.

... If you're in a position to launch, whoever you are, now or in the future, if you're in a position to send the targeting orders, if it's up to you, whoever you are, my plea is "Nothing justifies following orders for genocide. Don't send those orders, don't twist those keys."

Demonstrating the mindset of those who endorse Israel's use of nuclear weapons, author Ron Rosenbaum cites well-known American Jewish academic, Dr. David Perlmutter, who wrote a shocking piece in the Los Angeles Times on April 7, 2002. In his essay, "Dark Thoughts and Quiet Desperation," Perlmutter issued a threat in no uncertain terms:

Perlmutter is not the only distinguished Jewish voice making such threats. Dr. Martin van Crevald of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Israel's preeminent geopolitical and military thinker, made his own threat against the non-Jewish world in the January 2003 edition of the Dutch magazine Elsevier:

We [Israelis] possess several hundred atomic warheads and rockets and can launch them at targets in all directions, perhaps even at Rome. Most European capitals are targets of our air force. Our armed forces are not the 30th strongest in the world, but rather the second or third. We have the capacity to take the world down with us. And I can assure you that this will happen before Israel goes under.
